State-Tribal Legislation: 1992 and 1993 Summaries

In 1993, 238 bills, resolutions and memorials were introduced into the state legislatures concerning state-tribal issues, and 116 were enacted, with 31 pending. Out of 291 bills introduced in 1992, 106 were enacted. The National Conference of State Legislatures has tracked state-tribal relations in 1991, 1992 and 1993. The major topics have been: authority for intergovernmental agreements, burial protection, child welfare, cultural and historical preservation, designation of Native American days or weeks, economic development, education, federal and state recognition of certain Indian tribes, gambling, jurisdiction, natural resources allocation and protection of hunting, fishing, timber, and water rights, religious freedom, sovereignty, taxation, tribal courts and waste disposal. These issues and an analysis of state-tribal relations are the subject of a forthcoming book by the National Conferences of State Legislatures' State-Tribal Relations Task Force.

State legislatures are an increasingly important forum for the discussion and resolution of state-tribal disputes as shown by the steady growth in enacted bills, from 80 in 1991 to 116 in 1993. Reasons for this trend are fourfold. First, there are more American Indians, Native Alaskans and Native Hawaiians being elected to the state legislatures. Second, Indian tribes have been given the authority to implement federal regulatory programs similar to those of states, causing re-evaluation of the relationship between tribal programs and state programs. Third, state policymakers are becoming more aware of the importance of tribal issues within the states. Finally, Indian tribes and states are more frequently opting for negotiated settlement of disputes rather than costly and time-consuming resolution through the judicial system.

States and Indian tribes approach mutual concerns in something of a legal wilderness. Though case law is being built on a regular basis, a definitive and workable doctrine on state-tribal relations is not found in any state or tribal constitution, nor in the U.S. Constitution. Frank Pommersheim, professor of law at the University of South Dakota draws the conclusion that the lack of a readily applicable doctrine yields the potential for "creative free-play and mutual governmental respect and advancement" between states and tribes; however, this lack of a definitive statement has often led to "acrimonious enmity between the tribes and the states." Much of the acrimony has been carried into the courts. State political processes are alternatives to the judicial system for the resolution of conflicting state-tribal interests.

This report summarizes state legislative activity in 1992 and 1993, starting with 1993. An overview of each year is followed by state-by-state summaries.

1993 Summary

Gambling was the principal state-tribal issue in 1993. It was discussed in Arizona, California, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, Oklahoma, Oregon and Wisconsin. Many states requested the U.S. Congress and the president to review the constitutionality of the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act of 1988. States also considered authorizing compact negotiation and execution by the governor as well as the ratification of state-tribal gaming compacts. Many states introduced legislation restricting the duration of these compacts.

Education garnered as much attention as gambling in Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Dakota, Washington and Wisconsin. These measures included the implementation of American Indian history, language and culture into school curriculum; college scholarships; and tuition issues.

Indian affairs offices and commissions were renamed, created, had duties revised or were considered as permanent committees of legislatures in Florida, Idaho, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Tennessee and Wyoming.

Natural resources protection and allocation were considered in Arizona, Hawaii, Maine, Minnesota, New Mexico, New York, Oregon and Washington.

Protection and identification procedures for burial grounds and funerary objects received attention in Alabama, California, Maryland, Minnesota, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Utah. Many states debated severity of penalties for infringement on burial sites or for the sale of objects recovered from burial sites.

Taxation was considered in Nevada, New Mexico, New York, North Dakota, Oregon and South Dakota. A bill in the Kansas legislature was defeated that would have ceded taxing jurisdiction over Indian tribes, and Montana considered special taxation of coal that was produced by an Indian tribe.

The issue of tribal sovereignty was considered in Alabama, Georgia, Hawaii, Louisiana, New Mexico, New York, Rhode Island, South Carolina and Vermont. Public education about sovereignty and investigations into the sovereignty of tribes was debated. An Alabama resolution clarifying, defining and reaffirming its sovereign relationship with the Choctaw Indians was not passed. This resolution was defeated in the 1992 session as well.

Arizona, New Mexico and Wisconsin debated the appropriateness of American Indian nicknames and logos.

Hawaii with 72 bills and resolutions and New Mexico with 43 comprised the bulk of legislation introduced into state legislatures. Much of the legislation in Hawaii focused on addressing past treatment of Native Hawaiians and fashioning present-day agreements to restore the sovereignty of Native Hawaiians. New Mexico passed numerous "nuts and bolts" bills dealing with specific concerns like solid waste management, religious freedom and cross-deputization.

American Indians were newly elected to the legislature in the states of Maine, North Carolina, New Mexico and South Dakota. Presently, 11 indigenous Hawaiians serve in the Hawaii Legislature.

As Pommersheim has noted, "tribal-state relations have foundered conceptually, politically and economically from the earliest days of the republic." But the manifold problems that exist are not intractable. An increasingly important arena for the reconciliation of state-tribal issues is the legislatures of the states. A state-by-state analysis of bills follows.

State Legislation Passed in 1993

Alabama

The three bills introduced into the Alabama legislature concerning American Indian issues did not pass. The first reaffirmed the sovereign relationship between the state of Alabama and the Choctaw Indians. The second created the Alabama Indian Housing Authority and the third increased the penalty for desecration of Indian burial sites to a Class C felony.

Alaska

Two bills were held over for the next session in the Senate Judiciary Committee. The first bill allowed the reinstatement of involuntarily dissolved Native corporations. The second related to state and local taxation as affected by the Alaskan Native Corporations Settlement Act. Senate Bill 20, a duplicate of the first bill was held over for the next session in the Senate Committee on Regional Community Affairs. One resolution and committee substitute bill were passed.

CSHB 217—Allows minors in the custody of the state that are members of a Native Corporation to become entitled to receive dividends or other distributions resulting from ownership or stock in a Native corporation. Signed by the governor on July 6, 1993.

HJR 25—Requests the United States Coast Guard not to require alterations of a vessel or equipment of a vessel used in the Aleutian trade that would disrupt essential freight service to the Aleutian Islands. Signed by governor on March 10, 1993.

Arizona

Seven of nine bills failed to pass as well as one House memorial and House concurrent resolution. In the Appropriations Committee, two pieces of legislation died. The first clarified the responsibilities of the Office of Indian Affairs, and the second would have funded Indian programs through the Department of Economic Security. A House Memorial asking the United States government to reopen the Navajo-Hopi land dispute negotiations died in the Judiciary Committee. The last two House bills dealt with the Arizona Racing Department and both died in committee. The first allowed for the nomination of one American Indian to the Arizona Racing Commission, and the second authorized the Arizona Department of Racing to oversee the implementation of compacts for Indian lands. In the House Committee on Commerce, a bill limiting the governor's authority to execute tribal-state gambling died as did a resolution requesting clarification of the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act. A bill setting a sunset date for tribal-state compacts did not pass the Senate.

Two Senate bills, one House bill and a House resolution failed to pass in the special legislative session. HB 2002 would have allowed the governor to negotiate and execute tribal-state gaming compacts. A House concurrent resolution requested the U.S. Congress to revise and clarify the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act. Senate Bill 1001 was a duplicate of HB 2002 and SB 1005 set a duration limit and voter approval renewal on state-tribal gaming compacts. The following two pieces of legislation were enacted.

HB 2016—Authorizes the superintendent of public instruction to enter into compacts with adjacent states containing federally recognized Indian tribes to allow access to Arizona public schools by students on the same Indian reservation yet residing in a different state. Signed by the governor on March 3, 1993.

SB 1080—Allows Indian reservation "community colleges" to be exempt from the State Community College Board's jurisdiction. Signed by the governor on April 20, 1993.

One bill failed to pass that would have authorized the repatriation of Native American remains, and the following are still under consideration.

AJR 41—Requests the president and Congress to provide at least two federally owned sites for the burial and reburial of Native Americans. On second reading in the Senate Committee on Natural Resources and Wildlife.

Colorado

One bill and one resolution in the legislature dealt with education. House Joint Resolution 1032 encouraged the instruction of Native American language and culture in the public education system, it passed the House and failed in the Senate. SB 20 was postponed indefinitely in the Senate. It would have required Native American history, culture and contributions to the civil government be added to the public school curriculum.

Connecticut

House Bill 7219 withholds funds from federally recognized Indian tribes unless the tribe establishes and adopts an Employment Rights Code for employees of the tribe and allows the governor to negotiate rights for employees of commercial enterprises that are subject to tribal jurisdiction. ## 1992 Summary

In 1992 38 states considered legislation that addressed issues of particular concern to Native American citizens. In 25 states, legislators enacted laws and passed resolutions and memorials on those issues. Topics ranged from religious freedom to gaming, from repatriation of human remains to tax collection. In all, 291 bills and resolutions were introduced, an increase over 1991 when approximately 200 bills were introduced. At least 106 pieces of the 1992 legislation had received final approval by September 1992.

Hawaii's Legislature, with 48 bills and resolutions, led the field in enactments. The state extended a formal apology to the Hawaiian people for breeches of trust responsibility, and a number of acts focused on issues of housing, education, language, health, and corrections as they affect Native Hawaiians.

The House and Senate of Oklahoma—identified in the 1990 census as the state with the greatest number of Native Americans—passed six pieces of legislation dealing with such matters as funding for continuation of the Oklahoma Indian Affairs Commission, extending full faith and credit to tribal courts, training of cross-deputized tribal police officers, and collection of cigarette taxes.

Arizona strengthened its laws regarding the authenticity of Indian arts and crafts, passed a law requiring the state Superior Court to recognize tribal court orders for involuntary commitment, and asked the legislatures of Colorado, New Mexico and Utah to pass laws preventing the exporting of substandard gasoline to the Navajo Reservation.

Legislation in Maine addressed the trust status of lands of the Penobscot and Passamaquoddy Tribes and extended tribal jurisdiction over criminal, civil and domestic matters on trust lands that fall within exclusive jurisdiction of tribal courts. Three of New Mexico's six legislative memorials focused on issues of importance to many Native Americans: requesting supplemental appropriations from Congress for programs for Indian elderly, supporting the Second National Native American Very Special Arts Festival and requesting Congress to adopt amendments to the American Indian Religious Freedom Act of 1978.

The California Legislature also stated its support of amendments to the American Indian Religious Freedom Act of 1978. The legislature approved a cooperative arrangement in which a county Community Action Agency may serve as the grantee for an American Indian program by sharing allocation authority with an American Indian "entity."

The Colorado General Assembly addressed religious freedom concerns by passing a law ensuring that American Indians confined to a correctional facility will have access to spiritual leaders, religious objects and religious facilities.

By joint legislative resolution, Maine commemorated 1992 as the Year of the Native American and Michigan commemorated October 12, 1992, as Michigan's Aboriginal People's Day. A Senate resolution in New Hampshire proclaimed October 12, 1992, as Native American Day, which day also commemorates the 500th anniversary of the arrival of Christopher Columbus.

Georgia and Maryland passed laws to allow the return of human remains to Native descendants or appropriate American Indian tribes. California and Hawaii enacted similar legislation in 1991.

Illinois now includes Native Americans among the minority students eligible to apply and qualify for minority teacher scholarship assistance. Virginia encourages public schools to emphasize appropriate activities for all grades during Native American Week.

Minnesota adopted legislation to permit tribes electing to cover their workers under state unemployment compensation to be treated as nonprofit corporations. Alaska law now permits certain service with the Alaska

Bureau of Indian Affairs to be credited to state retirement systems.

Washington created a joint legislative committee to review gaming compacts negotiated under the federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act, and Wisconsin acted to specify the forms of gambling that may be conducted by Indians on tribal lands.

Minnesota named an American Indian Child Welfare Advisory Council and made the American Indian Advisory Task Force permanent council.

A brief summary of each piece of 1992 Native American affairs legislation follows.

State Legislation Passed in 1992

Alabama

A bill clarifying, acknowledging and reaffirming the sovereign relationship between the state of Alabama and the Choctaw Indians was postponed indefinitely. The following legislation was enacted:

S 53—Relates to the Alabama Sunset Law and continues the existence and functioning of the Alabama Indian Affairs Commission with certain modifications. Under the legislation, all activities by or on behalf of the state affecting Indian tribes must be studied and considered by the Alabama Indian Affairs Commission (AIAC). The AIAC also would receive half of all money resulting from judgments, settlements or other funds concerning the culture, historic site, or location of any aboriginal tribes located in Alabama.

Alaska

Thirteen bills and resolutions were introduced relating to Native American issues in Alaska. A measure to create a native language education curriculum, and an advisory board for districts with a high population of Native Alaskan students was defeated in the House. The following measures were enacted:

H 266—Includes service in a Bureau of Indian Affairs contract school as BIA service in the teacher's retirement system.

H 315—Relates to the inheritance and transfer of stock in corporations organized under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act.

H 323—Relates to credited services in the Public Employees' Retirement System for certain employment with the Alaska Bureau of Indian Affairs.

HJR 68—Urges Congress to reopen the Native allotments process for the benefit of Native military veterans.

S 283—Relates to the inheritance and transfer of stock in corporations organized under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act.

Arizona

Twenty pieces of legislation were examined by Arizona lawmakers. A bill concerning health care would have allowed tribes to assume the responsibility previously held by the county for eligibility determination for hospitalization and medical care of the indigent sick residing on the reservation. This bill also would have allowed the governor to enter into contracts or compacts with Indian tribes rather than the counties regarding health care for Native Americans on the reservations. The bill saw no action in the House. Another bill that was not enacted would have legalized peyote use in bona fide practice of Native American religious beliefs as an integral part of a Native American religious exercise. A third bill that has seen no action requires counties receiving money from the Arizona highway user fund to share money with Indian reservations for the maintenance of streets and highways on the reservation(s) located within the county. One Senate bill established a 50-foot limit for voting booths allowing only election officials and people who are voting to be inside the 50-foot limit. This bill, which was not acted on, would apply to an Indian tribe holding an election at a polling place simultaneously with any other election. The following legislation was enacted.

H 21/3—Makes an appropriation in FY 1993 and again in FY 1994 to pay the state's contribution to the Ft. McDowell Indian Community Development Fund established by the community's Water Rights Settlement Act of 1990.

S 1159—Protects the public and Indian craftsmen from false representation in the sale of Indian arts and crafts that are not made by Native Americans. If a person sells or offers for sale nonauthentic Indian arts and crafts, then a sign must be posted explaining that items for sale are not authentic Indian arts and crafts. This act also requires a person selling what is represented as authentic Indian arts or crafts to "make due inquiry" (not defined) of suppliers as to the true nature of the manufacture and materials; provides that the $5,000 limit on the penalty for violating the general Indian Arts/Crafts Protection Law is removed; provides that a $500 per violation penalty is added; provides that a new section makes it an increasingly greater crime to violate the law depending on the value of the arts and crafts.

S 1119—Requires the State Superior Court to recognize and enforce an order for involuntary commitment issued by an Indian Tribal Court.

SCM 1001—Advises the legislatures of Colorado, New Mexico and Utah that distributors in their states are exporting substandard gasoline to the Navajo Indian Reservation in Arizona and asks them to pass laws to prevent it. The memorial was sent to the Arizona secretary of state to be sent to the president of the Senate, speaker of the House, and the chairmen of the legislative transportation committees of the states involved.

SCM 1004—Asks federal authorities to order the Indian Health Services Agency to fund the Dilkon Health Center.

California

California has the second-largest state population of Native Americans. The governor vetoed a bill providing technical assistance for the construction of suitable, decent, safe and sanitary housing for American Indians. A bill died in the Taxation and Public Safety Management Committee that clarified the state's enforcement powers over a solid waste facility in Indian Country. The proposed creation through a constitutional amendment of a nonvoting position in each house to be held by an indigenous Californian American Indian representative also failed. The two enactments that passed were:

AJR 98—States the Legislature's support of amendments to the federal American Indian Religious Freedom Act of 1978.

S 1529—Provides, in a county with a population of more than 7,000,000 people, that the County Community Action Agency may serve as the grantee for an American Indian program if requested by a commission composed of representatives of American Indian beneficiaries in that county and the county board of supervisors shares grant allocation authority with an appropriate American Indian entity.

Colorado

Colorado lawmakers passed two acts affecting Native Americans and tribal lands:

S 163—Concerns amendments to conform the Colorado Surface Coal Mining Act with the federal Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977. Revises definitions of "operator" and "surface coal mining operation" to include removal of coal from facilities that store waste from coal processing plants. Makes federal entities and Indian tribes that conduct operations outside Indian lands subject to permit requirements. Allows applications with any public office.

S 197—Concerns freedom of worship for those confined to a correctional facility, grants American Indian inmates who practice an American Indian religion access to spiritual leaders, religious objects, and religious facilities on a basis comparable to access afforded inmates who practice Judeo-Christian religions.

Connecticut

Native American affairs were considered in three bills in the Connecticut General Assembly. A bill requiring construction and operation of toll plazas at the entrance of any Indian reservation conducting gambling activities went to the Committee on Public Safety. Those living on the reservation would not pay the toll. A public hearing was held, but the bill progressed no further. A task force on Indian affairs to review the operations and effectiveness of the Indian Affairs Council, and to study the state's relationship with Native Americans not indigenous to Connecticut would have been established under another bill. The task force would make recommendations to the governor and to the assembly concerning state policy relating to Native Americans in the state. This bill was moved to the foot of the calendar in the Senate and died. Indigenous Native American tribes would have been able to regulate hunting and fishing on reservations under a bill that died in the Environment Committee.

Georgia

A bill held over from the 1991 session dealing with repatriation of human remains was enacted into law in April 1992. This law outlines procedures regarding the discovery of human remains and prohibits the exhibition of human remains. In accordance with this law certain museums must catalog all human remains and burial objects and return them to lineal (direct) descendants or the American Indian tribe of the deceased. A second bill deals with appropriate treatment of burial grounds.

H 457—Relates to parks and historic areas; provides that the state does not claim title to human remains and burial objects discovered on state properties or defined as submerged cultural resources; authorizes the Department of Natural Resources to establish and maintain a cemetery for the purpose of reintering certain human remains and burial objects.

H 1611—Relates to abandoned cemeteries and burial grounds, clarifies that burial grounds include private plots; provides that preservation and protection of burial grounds encompass cleaning, restoration, maintenance and upkeep.

Hawaii

In 1992, Hawaii's legislature considered 48 pieces of legislation concerning Native American issues.

HB 370—In compliance with federal law, house bill 370, signed by the governor, appropriates money to assist in the repatriation of human remains and sacred objects from institutions using federal funds.

The governor also signed a bill strengthening the efforts of the Hawaiian Homes Commission to provide water on Hawaiian home lands for settlement by indigenous Hawaiians. This bill is designed to reserve enough water for settlement by indigenous Hawaiian home lands.

Money was appropriated to provide low-interest loans for self-help house construction on Hawaiian home lands on the island of Hawaii. The governor signed this bill on April 16, 1992.

A resolution urges counties to work with the Department of Hawaiian Home Lands to allow the development of low-income housing for families that aren't able to build single family detached housing. Occupation and development of Hawaiian home lands would combat homelessness, which leads many native Hawaiians to house their families in tents at public beach parks. A committee is also obtaining waivers from the United States Uniform Building Codes to speed the development of low-income housing.

Through a resolution the Department of Hawaiian Home Lands is requested to formally adopt a policy of self-determination among Native Hawaiian beneficiaries of the Hawaiian Home Claims Act. This master plan would eventually lead to a Hawaiian sovereign entity controlling and administering the HHCA.

A concurrent resolution requests the governor to provide the Office of Hawaiian Health with adequate staff and resources for statewide coordination of health services culturally appropriate to the Native Hawaiian community.

The Office of Hawaiian Affairs was requested to assess whether Native Hawaiians are over-represented in correctional institutions and to recommend ways to address any problems.

A House concurrent resolution requests the gifted and talented program to report its current efforts and recommendations to improve the delivery of programs to Native

Hawaiian children and other under-represented ethnic groups who are gifted and talented.

The Hawaiian House and Senate requested the federal government to withdraw its suit to condemn the Kamaka descendants' land in Waikane Valley and begin negotiations to fulfill lease conditions. This suit specifically addresses the accusation that the U.S. Marine Corps has breached the lease that requires that the land be cleaned up of any unexploded ordnance at the expiration of the lease. These conditions include continuing payment of the lease rent of an installment plan for cleaning up the land.

A resolution passed requesting the governor to institute appropriate legal proceedings against the United States and to solicit a congressional investigation into the trust obligations of the United States to Native Hawaiians. These legal proceedings would compel performance as well as redress past breeches of the trust obligations. This resolution requests the governor to solicit congressional investigations to determine whether public lands of Hawaii currently used by the United States are properly and legally held for actual and necessary civil, military, or naval purposes given the current paradigm in international relation and national security.

A measure recognizing the failures of the state of Hawaii to fulfill its trust responsibilities and extending a formal apology to the Hawaiian people for these failures was introduced. This measure would have addressed the issue of sovereignty and compensation to the beneficiaries of the Hawaiian Home Lands Trust for past abuses. The Legislature cites this breach of trust and treaty as the prime reason for the disproportionately high incidence of incarceration, infant mortality, substance abuse and domestic violence among Native Hawaiians. This measure formally recognizes the right of the indigenous Hawaiian people to sovereignty and self-determination. It also asks the president and the Congress to renew the recognition of and assist in the reestablishment of a sovereign indigenous Hawaiian government. The trust obligation shall be confirmed and be without prejudice toward the native Hawaiians' inherent right to the full exercise of sovereignty they never surrendered.

The following bills and resolutions passed.

H 2409—Relates to the Hawaiian language; provides that macrons and glottal stops may be used in the spelling of words or terms in the Hawaiian language in documents prepared by or for the state or county agencies or officials; states that any rule, order or policy, official or otherwise, that prohibits or discourages the use of these symbols shall be void.

H 2911—Enables 57 Hawaiian home lands lessees in Panaewa and Keaukaha on the Island of Hawaii to build their own affordable homes through self-help construction programs; appropriates $700,000 for Department of Hawaiian Home Lands to provide low-interest loans of up to $35,000 for the lessee.

H 3400—Relates to wages and hours; applies to any public works project where the contract to construct said public work has not been finally executed or the bid for a public works project has not been finally accepted even though the negotiations for the construction of said public works project have begun or agreement in principle has been reached.

HCR 262—Requests the governor to ensure that adequate staff and resources are provided in the Office of Hawaiian Health within the Department of Health for statewide coordination and direction of health services that are culturally appropriate to the Native Hawaiian community.

HCR 263—Urges the counties to work with the Department of Hawaiian Home Lands, Native Hawaiian community representatives, architects and community planners to establish interim development standards to encourage the early settlement of Hawaiian home lands housing estates.

HR 404—(Resolution) Requests the Department of Hawaiian Home Lands to adopt a policy of self-determination.

S 1434—Relates to people dispossessed or displaced by volcanic eruptions; awards long-term leases on state lands to those residents of Kalapana who are of Hawaiian ancestry and who were dispossessed or displaced from their homes as a result of volcanic eruptions on the island of Hawaii after January 3, 1983.

Idaho

In light of the quincentennial observance of Columbus' journey to America, Idaho declared 1992 the Year of the Native American and affirmed the cultural contributions of Native Americans. The resolution states, "[the Native American] way of life continues to offer insight into solutions for contemporary and urgent problems for a troubled planet and a fragmented people." Legislators also approved the following bill:

H 570—Allows peace officers of federally recognized Indian tribes to attend the state Peace Officer Standards and Training Academy upon certain conditions.

Illinois

The Illinois Legislature adopted one bill relating to Native Americans:

H 3278—Includes Asian Americans and Native Americans among the minority students eligible to apply and qualify for minority teacher scholarship assistance.

Iowa

HB 2468 would have authorized the Department of Revenue and Finance to enter into agreements with an Indian tribe to collect and distribute a state tax or a tribal tax. The bill has not moved, primarily due to tribal opposition.

Kansas

Eight bills were introduced in the legislature, none of which passed. A concurrent resolution attempted to supersede the power of the U.S. secretary of the Interior to make tribal-state gaming compacts. If such a compact were made it would be illegal to implement unless ratified by the state legislature. Legislation retroceding to an Indian nation all or part of federal jurisdiction delegated to the state of Kansas was defeated. A bill died that would have enforced tax collection on transactions of nontribal members living on reservations located in Kansas.

Kentucky

A bill naming the Delilah Whitecloud United Cherokee Indian Tribe of Kentucky as the official Native American Cherokee Indian tribe of Kentucky died as did a bill proposing the operation of a housing authority on the reservation.

Maine

Eleven bills and resolutions were introduced in the Legislature in 1992. Modifications to the Maine Indian Settlement Claims Act of 1970 between the Penobscot Nation and the Maine Land Use Regulations Commission was not resolved. This bill would have provided for greater flexibility in land use management. A bill to allow Maine's federally recognized Indian tribes to conduct high-stakes beano games as a means of raising money for tribal operations did not pass. A bill placing regulatory authority with the Passamaquoddy Tribe for reservation land use control, including freshwater wetlands, was passed by the House and the Senate but has been sitting on the governor's desk since March 1992. A joint resolution commemorating 1992 as the Year of the Native American passed, as did the following legislation:

H 1433 (LD 2045)—Fixes a flat rate of 25 percent by which the state subsidy for education may be reduced as a result of the receipt of federal funds for school operations by the Penobscot Nation and the Passamaquoddy Tribe.

H 1469 (LD 2081)—Allows the Passamaquoddy Tribe to place into trust a small farm that the tribe acquired from a member in 1988.

H 1472 (LD 2084)—Concerns the Penobscot Nation trust land designation; gives consent to the town of Lakeville and the Penobscot Nation to place in trust status land owned by the Penobscot Nation.

H 1494 (LD 2106)—Extends the territorial jurisdiction of the Passamaquoddy and Penobscot Tribal Courts to all of the trust lands of the respective tribes, instead of just their reservations, over those criminal, civil and domestic matters that fall within the exclusive jurisdiction of the tribal courts; extends the jurisdiction of the Passamaquoddy Tribal Court to include Class D offenses committed by tribal members; makes clear that the tribal courts have jurisdiction over all Class D and Class E offenses.

Maryland

In May 1992 the governor signed into law a bill allowing Indian tribes to reclaim human remains and burial objects from museums or trusts. Indian remains also will be repatriated if discovered on new archaeological sites.

H 1081—Permits transfer of human remains, including Native American human remains, held by the Maryland Historical Trust to descendants of deceased, culturally affiliated groups, or groups, or other appropriate places of repose, as delineated; requires the Maryland Historical Trust to adopt regulations to carry out provisions of the Act; and defines "human remains" and "Native American."

Massachusetts

Massachusetts' Senate Committee on State Administration is studying a bill that will replace Columbus Day with Native American Day. The bill is not expected to move out of committee.

HR 987—Endorses efforts of the Little River Band of Ottawa Indians to obtain federal reaffirmation as a Michigan historic Indian tribe.

SCR 754—Commemorates October 12, 1992, as Michigan's Aboriginal People's Day.

Minnesota

Seven pieces of legislation were considered by Minnesota; all but three died. HB 827, which defined "Native American wild rice," would have required any label to contain the name and address of the Indian reservation where the wild rice was grown and harvested to preserve the authenticity of Native American products. Identical bills requesting the University of Minnesota to establish a policy center for American Indian law and social justice on the Duluth campus failed to pass. The center would have engaged in research, data collection, information dissemination, and resource material acquisition, providing impetus for a tribal-university partnership. Duplicate bills also were introduced prohibiting the use of state money by any school using names or mascots demeaning to Native Americans; neither bill passed. The following legislation was enacted:

S 1590 (Same as H 2360)—Provides that Indian tribes that elect to cover their workers under state unemployment compensation shall be treated as nonprofit corporations. Allows the Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians to elect coverage and be assigned a zero experience rate for 1988 through 1990.

Missouri

Legislators introduced a bill to stop the transfer of money after 1993 to benefit a county sports complex owned or leased by a team that discriminates against Native Americans or mocks sacred Native American symbols; the bill did not pass. A bill to determine the proper disposition of remains having an ethnic affinity with living peoples would have allowed for consultation between the state historic preservation officer and leaders of the ethnic group. This bill died as well.

Nebraska

Nebraska's Unicameral considered four pieces of legislation pertaining to Native Americans. A bill for a Commission on Indian Affairs consisting of 14 enrolled tribal members was signed by the governor. The Health and Human Services Committee was asked to study services for Native American children and ways to improve the child protection service and foster care system in Nebraska. Bills held over from the 1991 session died with the end of the 1992 session. One would have allowed the governor to negotiate tribal-state compacts regulating certain types of gambling and to provide a public policy regarding the compacts. The other bill would have appropriated money to assist in the running of the Nebraska Indian Community College. The following legislation was enacted:

L 862—Established the Commission on Indian Affairs and describes the required quorum of the commission.

New Hampshire

Two resolutions were introduced in the Legislature. Both resolutions designated October 12, 1992, as Native American Day. The first died in the House and the second passed in the Senate.

This bill failed in the Assembly Judicial Committee. In the Senate Government Committee a bill designating the fourth Friday in September of every year as American Indian Day died. A bill establishing a New Jersey Commission on Indian Affairs, comprised of six public members appointed by the governor, with Senate confirmation based upon recommendations made by the American Indian Council of New Jersey, also failed to pass.

New Mexico

One House bill and nine memorials were introduced in the Legislature. One memorial would have protected the integrity of native arts and crafts of New Mexico Indian tribes and Pueblos, preventing them from being subject to theft and forgeries. It did not pass. A Native American languages bill died which required the courts to hire translators for individuals understanding only Navajo. Six of the nine memorials were passed and signed. A memorial clarifying the word "Indian" was defeated. This piece of legislation would have helped to stop the delivery of services to people claiming to be Indians who had less than one-quarter Indian blood. The following legislation was enacted:

House Joint Memorial 5—Supports the Second National Native American Very Special Arts Festival.

House Memorial 76—Requests the Congress of the United States to approve supplemental appropriations for the Indian Health Service to continue to fund programs for Indian elderly and to eliminate alleged discriminatory allocation of resources.

House Memorial 78—Requests the New Mexico congressional delegation to request the Federal Emergency Management Agency to consolidate the Navajo Nation into one Federal Emergency Management Agency Region and classify the Navajo Nation as either a state or local government for disaster relief assistance funding.

Ohio

Still pending is a resolution that recognizes the Piqua Sept of Ohio Shawnee Tribe as an Indian tribe and a sovereign entity.

Oklahoma

Seven bills and resolutions were considered by Oklahoma lawmakers. Two resolutions and one Senate bill were passed. A bill to protect the authenticity of Native American products died in committee.

Legislation legalizing the use of peyote within the Native American church was withdrawn from the Senate floor. SR 22—Memorializes the federal executive and legislative branches to transfer 110 acres of land, where the Holy City of the Wichitas is located, from a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Refuge to a Comanche County public trust.

Pennsylvania

Pennsylvania lawmakers considered two bills this session. The bills establish an advisory panel on Indian burials. This panel would have the power to designate a grave site as a Native American burial site and establishes penalties for anyone failing to report an Indian burial ground. The bills also provide guidelines for reburial of remains or funerary objects.

South Dakota

In the 1992 session, five pieces of legislation were considered. Legislation appropriating $50,000 toward the Indian scholarship program was tabled in committee. The governor vetoed another bill concerning scholarships for American Indians. If a tribe and state could not mutually agree on any resolution, such as gaming, taxation, environmental issues or education, legislation would require the dispute to be submitted to arbitration. This measure was tabled indefinitely. A bill was tabled that established reconciliation processes in the area of Indian gaming. This bill recognizes the efforts of Indian tribes to enhance economic development through gaming and further states that South Dakota is willing to negotiate compact provisions.

Tennessee

The governor signed into law an extension for the termination dates of governmental entities, specifically the Commission on Indian Affairs.

S 1865—Extended the termination date for the Commission on Indian Affairs under sunset laws.

SCR 11—Urges Congress to remove the state of Utah as trustee of the Navajo Trust Fund, and further urges that the Navajo Nation be made trustee of the funds.

Vermont

Virginia

Virginia lawmakers passed both resolutions concerning Native American issues:

HJR 23—Encourages all public school divisions to enhance and emphasize appropriate commemorative and learning activities for Native American week in the curricula and programming for all grade levels.

SJR 15—Requests that the Council on Indians study official recognition of the Cherokee Indian Tribe.

Washington

A measure extending membership in the legislature to federally recognized tribes within the state failed to pass. This bill provided for two delegates from each tribe to serve as nonvoting participants with all other privileges as a member of the legislature. A House memorial failed that would have requested Congress to enact legislation assuring the unacknowledged tribes located in Washington (the Chinook, Cowlitz, Duwamish, Samish, Snohomish, Snoqualmie and Steilacoom) the opportunity to petition the U.S. Department of the Interior for federal acknowledgment in a manner which is clear, unbiased and timely in administrative response. A bill requiring that no agreement between a tribe and the Department of Wildlife be effective until approved by the Wildlife Commission after public hearings also died, as did a bill pertaining to water rights that would allow the state to pursue a cooperative water resource planning and management effort with tribes. The House and Senate passed authorization (Session Law 492) for the governor to execute gaming compacts on behalf of the state with federally-recognized tribes under the Federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act. The following legislation was enacted:

S 6004—Reviews Indian gaming compacts; creates a joint legislative committee to review negotiations under the federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act; provides for the negotiation of tribal-state compacts; provides an opportunity for public comment on any proposed compact.

West Virginia

Wisconsin

In 1991-1992 the Wisconsin Legislature gave much attention to Native American issues. Act 39 was signed into law in August of 1991 as part of the governor's budget bill. One section of the bill created a Great Lakes Law Program at the University of Wisconsin at Madison Law School. Another provision allocated money to tribal governing bodies through the Department of Health and Social Services for the funding of drug abuse prevention programs for Native American Indians. The act also authorized the Department of Transportation to use prior convictions of a tribal court to suspend or revoke a person's operating privileges. A final provision provided funds for fisheries and wildlife management. This act also created positions to continue joint research with the 11 tribes and bands in Wisconsin. A Gaming Commission was created in Act 269 to function as an Indian gaming liaison between Native Americans and the populace of the state, an informational clearinghouse of issues concerning Native American gaming as well as assisting the governor in determining types of gaming that may be conducted by Indians. The act also provides funds for a feasibility study of establishing a visitors' center on the history of the Black Hawk War of 1832. Act 320 requires investigations of Indian gaming employees and vendors. The following legislation was enacted in 1992:

A 258 (introduced 03/21/91; approved by Legislature 04/28/92; line-item vetoed by governor)—Relates to business development on Indian reservations, provides for a study and makes appropriations.

The following legislation was enacted:

H 2—Appropriates money, including appropriations for Native Americans, from various funds for the 1993-1994 biennium.

S 100—Provides an appropriation from the mineral severance protest account within the trust and agency fund for the alleviation of specified conditions on the Wind River Indian Reservation; imposes conditions upon the expenditure of appropriated funds.
